Three B.C. Nursing Organizations Issue a Common Message

ARNBC is working with BCNU and CRNBC to deliver a message about the importance of a strong provincial nursing directorate in order to ensure safe nursing practice in B.C.

“It is a milestone to have three provincial nursing organizations committed to working toward a Provincial Nursing Plan that will address issues of significance to B.C. nurses,” says Susan Duncan, ARNBC President. “Nurses can make great strides in improving nursing care and health care delivery when they have ways to contribute their ideas and expertise to policy and this is why a strong nursing presence in government is needed. This call for action by all three organizations is a powerful stand taken on behalf of nursing and health care.”

ARNBC, BCNU and CRNBC collaborated to develop a common message card in the form of a bookmark. Nurses throughout the province will receive a copy of this message through a variety of ways. All three organizations are making it available on their websites.

As a Nursing Week activity, nurses are urged to ask their election candidates to commit to a Provincial Nursing Plan and to support a Nursing Directorate.
